WIFE ACCUSES FAMOUS MODEL.

CLARA BETZ MADE CORBSPON-DENT IN DIVORCE SUIT.

noman Whose Beauty Whistler Praised Denies, as Chauncey E. Hutchinson Does, That There Is Any Ground for Mrs. Hutchinson's Grave Allegations

The beautiful face and form of Clara Betz, the artist's model of whom Whistler is reported to have said "Heaven at last has sent me a perfect woman," have so upset the domestic felicity of Chauncey Hutchinson, who is president of the Crawford shoe makers, that Mrs. Hutchinson has begun an action in the Supreme Court for a divorce. But, while Mrs. Hutchinson insists that she believes Miss Betz to be the woman in the case, both the model and the shoemaker assert that she is not.

Mary Frances Hutchinson and Chauncey E. Hutchinson were married at Crown Point, N. Y., in January, 1890, and have four children, two boys and two girls, ranging in age from 4 to 14 years. Hutchinson, who comes from Burlington, Vt. has been in the shoe trade for years, in various parts of the East, and some time ago purchased a controlling interest in the Crawford firm. His wife says that he owns $42,000 worth of stock in the con-

About two years ago, Mrs. Hutchinson alleges on information and belief, her husband became infatuated with Miss Betz. The wife has in her possession a bill from a fur firm charging Hutchinson $325 for a set of Russian sables, and Mrs. Hutchinson declares that he made a gift of the furs to the model, who afterward posed in them.

Last year, Mrs. Hutchinson says, her husband went to Europe, taking Clara Betz with him, and paying all her expenses. At present, she says, he is maintaining the model in luxury, while he refuses to support his family.

Mrs. Hutchinson is living at present at 469 Eighth street, Brooklyn, a house owned by her husband. He is allowing her $1,000 year for the support of herself and the Wright, a friend, say that on March 11, accompanied by two detectives, they went to the St. Denis Hotel and, by a ruse, managed to obtain admission to the room where Hutchinson was. They turned up the gas, they say, and discovered that there was a woman in his company, but they don't know her name.

woman in his company, but they don't know her name.

Hutchinson's defence is a vigorous denial of all his wife's allegations. In addition he declares that his wife is insanely jealous and full of baseless suspicions. It is wicked and cruel, he says, to drag the name of Miss Betz into the affair, for there is no reason to link her with the alleged occurrence of March 11. It is only to satisfy her wrath and jealousy that Mrs. Hutchinson mentions the model's name at all, he asserts, and, as far as he knows, Miss Betz is a young woman of irreproachable morality.

is a young woman of irreproachable morality.

His life has been made so unhappy as to become unbearable, Hutchinson says, by the constant nagging of his wife. He instances specifically her conduct on May 4, 1903. He came home that night, he says, at a quarter to 12, tired to exhaustion with working overtime in his office. She received him, he says, with the remark that she would kill him if she could, and only wished she had a brother who was able. Five months later, he says, when he came home at 9 o'clock of the evening of Oct. 10, she told him that she was not satisfied with him, and they had better separate. Notwithstanding this, he says, he has always tried to be a faithful and dutiful husband, and has never refused to support her as well as his means allowed. He adds that she has an exaggerated idea of his possessions.

she has an exaggerated idea of his possessions.

Hutchinson's counsel, Howe & Hummel, have obtained an affidavit from Miss Betz, in which she categorically denies that she was ever indiscreet with Hutchinson on March 11 or at any other time. She has known him, she says, in a business way for four years, having first met him when he was anxious to design some novelties in shoes. Later, she explains, she wanted to buy a set of Russian sables on which she had set her eye, and knowing that Hutchinson, through his trade connections, could procure her a considerable discount on the retail price, she asked him to buy them for her, giving him the money. In this way, she says, she saved a considerable sum. It is true, Miss Betz admits, that she and Hutchinson sailed for Europe last year

Born in Kentucky, she was educated in Brooklyn. While still a school girl at Columbia Heights she married, in 1892, Robert O. Betz, but the union proved unhappy, and in September, 1902, she procured a divorce in Milwaukee. Her measurements, as recorded four years ago, are as follows: Height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 135 pounds; bust, 36 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 37 inches; thigh, 25 inches; calf, 14½ inches; ankle, 8 inches; bands, 6½ inches; feet

Runaway Stopped Itself.

The horse of John Wilson, a hansom cab driver, took fright at a hoisting engine at Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue at Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue yesterday. Wilson held the animal in check for a block. Then the step of the hansom caught in the spokes of a delivery wagon wheel. The delivery wagon was lifted sharply on one side, pitching out Norman Tucker, the driver, and then the two vehicles were locked firmly together so that neither horse could run away.

Tucker had his left side badly crushed. He insisted on going home.

One of the returning opera singers has just paused in New York long enough to sing into one of the phonographs. Her unwillingness to do this was unusual, as artists have in some cases received large sums for a song record. One soprano got $15,000 for four songs. This particular woman got nothing, which explains her state of mind.

She was under contract to sing in forty performances at the opera, and only thirty-nine were provided for her. In all contracts the singers receive payment for the number of performances guaranteed to them. Something had to be done to make up that last performance, as the singer insisted on payment for it.

The impressario concerned the brilliant idea of having the lady sing in the talking machine. In vain she rebelled. Her manager was insistent and she had to agree to sing one song.

"That sign is regarded as a model. Hardly a week passes but the Pennsylvania people grant a request to take its measurements. I'm not advertising an electrical firm when I say this, for the engineers of the road made that sign.

"You see, there is everything in the space between the lights. If they are too close together the line is blurred. The proper spacing differs a good deal in different places; the Pennsylvania people seem to have hit the right combination for New York."

"A standard article advertised in all the papers," announced the faker. "Every fifth box contains from 5 to 50 cents in silver. It is throwing the money away, but we do it to introduce this marvellous medicinal preparation."

The capper—a half grown boy in this case—stepped out and bought a box. He opened it and drew forth a shiny half dollar. There was a rush for the faker, and in two minutes he had sold twenty boxes. Half the purchasers opened their boxes at once, but, naturally, no one except the capper drew a prize. cept the capper drew a prize.

It is true, Miss Betz admits, that she and Hutchinson sailed for Europe last year on the same steamer, but she calls it a deliberate and wilful falsehood to say that he accompanied her or paid her expenses. When they reached the other side, she says, they separated and went their various ways. She also denies positively that Hutchinson is now maintaining her. She is living at the Wellington.

Clara Betz is probably the best known model in the world. She has posed for almost every artist of any prominence, both for photographic purposes and for ideal pictures. Her living picture poses some years ago in "Yankee Doodle Dandy" are still remembered along Broadway. She posed for a statue exhibited by George Barnard at St. Louis. Whistler often painted her, and she was the model for Carli Blenner's "Spring" and Naegele's "Captive's Prize" and "Magdalen." She was also model for some of the exterior statuary out of Charles M. Schwab's Riverside Drive mansion, and for several panels in the Waldorf-Astoria.

Patent leather pumps assumed such an importance in men's summer dress last year that they were appropriate at almost any time. They were apparently the most popular article of drees for men. There was not much propriety in wearing patent eather on some of these occasions, but that consideration did not damage the popularity of the pumps. This year they have appeared in all materials suited to any time of the day. They are to be had in white cloth or leather, in rusee leather or even in calfskin which may be black-tened. Thus men who are determined to wear pumps will not have to confine themselves to the shiny black leather kind.

The real reason is that about eight accidents out of ten that come to the apparatus in the streets occur on a run that really wasn't necessary. If you read the newspapers closely you will find that at the end of alclosely you will find that at the end of almost every story about persons run over by fire engines or runaways in which apparatus is wrecked a line which says that 'the fire didn't amount to much,' or 'there was no fire.' IN SOCIETY.

"Lenten dulness" has been more a phrase than a fact this year. The sewing classes of the period will have their final meetings this week and a few weddings will be celebrated. Meanwhile there have been many entertainments for brides and bridegrooms

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Stevens Alexander, who had a fine wedding yesterday at 12:30 o'clock in St. Bartholomew's Church, are off on their wedding journey. Just a month hence they will sail for Europe and will travel about for most of the summer. Mr. Alexander is a young lawyer and has his office at 1 Newark street, Hoboken, where the Stevens family, of which his mother is a member, has its estate. On the return of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander from abroad they will take up their abode with Mrs. Archibald Alexander.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor will doubtless be one of the most admired matrons of the London smart set, having taken the house of Sir Archibald Edmonstone, 21 Portland place, for the season. Though Mrs. Astor was in London for a time during the early summer last year, this is the first time that she has taken a house.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Jr., the latter née Roosevelt, are sightseeing in London just now. Mrs. Robinson knows Europe well and especially England, where she grew up, her father, James Roosevelt Roosevelt, having been for some years First Secretary of the Embassy at London. They are expected to return home next month. Meanwhile Mrs. Robinson's parents and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson and Miss Corinne Robinson, are at Porto Rico. Europe well and especially England, where

Two little nieces of the bride, Lillian Dickerson and Ruth Ogden, will attend as flower maidens. The bridegroom will be assisted by Edwin C. Dusenberry as best man. Only relatives of the couple and intimate friends have been asked, and after the ceremony a bridal breakfast will be served.

Mrs. Frederic Neilson, who is at the Hot Springs, Va., will remain there until Easter, when she will return to town and after a short stay sail for Europe for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Rainey were among the passengers on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on Tuesday. Their marriage was a quiet affair on Monday and took place at the Collegiate Church Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street. They will make an auto trip through France and will return in July. The bridegroom is vice-president of the Century Bank, a director of the Astor National Bank and a member of the New York and Larchmont Yacht clubs.

Miss Katherine Barney attended her sister as maid of honor, and the Misses Adelaide Randolph, Ethel Cryder, Natica Rives and Mary Harriman were bridesmalds.

The Rev. Dr. Walton W. Battershall, rector of St. Peter's Church, Albany, N. Y., performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her father, Charles Tracy Barney, with whom she walked up the aisic. She wore a white satin gown, with three narrow-tuile flounces on the skirt, caught at one side with clustered orange blossoms. Over these was a flounce of point lace, and the front waist was made with deep pointed V filed in with lace and lace berthe. The elbow sleeves were of puffed satin, and a point appliqué veil oaught with a wreath of orange blossoms covered the long train,

After the church ceremony there was a bridal breakfast and reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tracy Barney, 67 Park avenue.

PASTOR TO DREDGE FOR COAL. The Rev. John Haight Hopes to Profit

From the Susquebanna. WILKESBARRS, Pa., April 8 .- The Rev. John Haight, pastor of the English Baptist Church at Lee Park and president of the Plymouth Borough Council, is building one of the largest coal dredges ever used on the Susquehanna. In addition to his ministerial duties he will dredge for coal, superintending the work himself.

His dredge will be a ministure breaker.

Navigation Opened on the Lakes.

Burralo, April 8.—Navigation opened at this port this morning when five boats got away bound for Lake Michigan and Lake Superior ports. Last year navigation at this port was opened on April 25. It was snowing when the boats cleared to-day.

Intending the work himself.

His dredge will be a miniature breaker. It will be equipped with rollers for breaking the coal into commercial sizes and with screens to separate them. A small fleet of flat boats will receive the coal from the chutes and a steamboat will baul them to a dock. A great deal of coal has been asshed down by the recent flood and Mr. Haight expects his venture to be a profitable one.
